March 2009 Newsletter

These are uncertain and anxious times for everyone. It is easy to become quickly frustrated when you feel like there is nothing you can do to help change negative or problematic situations around you.

Fortunately when it comes to politics, there are some things that you can do to help create change for the better.

Here are some helpful suggestions:

- *Be involved with the ECRW and support women both young and those mature in age to do the same. ECRW encourages women of all cultural backgrounds to join and enrich the club.
- *Write a letter to the editor expressing your concerns, solutions & ideas.
- *Contact your legislatures via email, mail or telephone.
- *Talk to your family, neighbors or co-workers about your political views. Start a discussion regarding the solutions to tough local or national issues. Talk to the younger generation about what it means to be an American.
- *Go to a local town council meeting or county commissioners meeting and know what officials are doing, planning etc.
- *Inform yourself through various online groups or media. Read the newspaper, magazines or books. Listen to talk radio.
- *Volunteer to help out in your community.

By doing these little things, you can help to bring about a change in attitude, opinion and action in yourself and others around you, for the better. Please don't wait, start empowering yourself and other Americans to do the right thing and build a better future starting today!
